PPWE Work Plan for 2019

Introduction

Greater inclusion of women is a worthy investment for the future that is crucial in expanding prosperity in the region. Women's active participation in all levels of economic activities - including decision-making, leadership, and governance - will result in favorable and inclusive business and economic environment, which are essentials in achieving sustainable growth. According to the International Labor Organization (ILO), increasing the employability of women can be one of the most important factors in reducing poverty.

Today, women account for almost half of the world's population with similar statistics in the Asia-Pacific region - and according to a recent study of the United Nations - limiting women's participation in the workforce is costing our region an estimated USD 89 billion every year, having approximately 600 million women in the labor force, with over 60 per cent of them engaged in the formal sector. Hence, achieving greater participation of women in the economy is a priority issue, still recognizing that there are challenges in achieving women's economic empowerment, gender diversity and gender inclusion that we must actively pursue.

As endorsed by Senior Officials in Big Sky, Montana, in 2011, the APEC Policy Partnership on Women and the Economy (PPWE) provides a streamlined and effective mechanism to integrate gender equality and women and the economy considerations and elevate the influence of women's economic issues in APEC. The PPWE advances the Framework for the Integration of Women in APEC based on the principle that gender equality is a cross-cutting issue within APEC. The PPWE, in conjunction with APEC processes, will provide the vehicle for SOM to continue work on issues that affect the economic empowerment of women in the APEC region. To that end, the PPWE, will continue to advance on its five pillars:

- Access to capital and assets;
- Access to markets;
- Skills, capacity building, and health;
- Leadership, voice, and agency; and
- Innovation and technology.

In addition, the PPWE will work to create avenues for women to equally participate and integrate into the digital economy by building and improving the appropriate infrastructure (physical and regulatory), expanding access to such infrastructure, and building capacity and skills of women and girls to utilize information and communications technology (ICT) to advance their businesses and education.

Under its theme "Connecting people, building the future", APEC 2019 will have a special focus on "Women, SMEs and Inclusive Growth". This is the first time in APEC history that women and the economy has featured as a host economy priority, which will provide an important opportunity to elevate this issue and share efforts and develop strategies at a regional level. Attached, as Annex A, is a Background Paper which sets out the specific deliverables that Chile is proposing as part of their "Women, SMEs and Inclusive Growth" priority.

PPWE will have a key role to play in developing and supporting Chile’s “Women, SMEs and Inclusive Growth” priority, including supporting the achievement of key deliverables, including on: (i) increasing the participation of women in non-traditional sectors; (ii) bridging the digital literacy gender gap; (iii) advancing women’s economic empowerment through data. The PPWE will have a leading role in coordinating across all APEC fora and committees to socialize, develop and secure endorsement of Chile’s signature deliverable in this priority area, (iv) the Women and Inclusive Growth Roadmap.

Additionally, the PPWE will continue to contribute to and support various on-going activities and initiatives, including:

- Continuing sectorial conversations with key APEC fora on economic empowerment for women in the areas of Transportation, Tourism, STEAM, Agriculture, Health, Mining, Labor, Education, Energy and MSMEs.
- Encouraging and supporting emerging ideas and initiatives in APEC fora to strengthen women’s economic participation, such as through anti-corruption, trade, and others.
- Continuing and strengthening engagement with APEC’s Economic Committee on structural reform and gender, including advocating for a 2020 APEC Economic Policy Report on Gender and Structural Reform. Producing a strong WEF Statement in 2019 to further progress on women’s empowerment.
- Further engaging with ABAC’s work to pursue collaboration, including through identifying key ABAC gender contact point/s to further enhance coordination between PPWE and ABAC, and with the broader private sector.
- Working with other relevant stakeholders to identify and pursue best practices, policies, programs and structural reforms to increase women’s economic empowerment, build upon relevant work taking place in APEC.
